ROCKY FLATS PLANT

A Plan for Prevention of Contaminant Dispersion

The U.S. Department of Energy has developed a Plan for Prevention of Contaminant Dispersion (PPCD) to address the potential release of contaminants resulting from environmental investigation and interim remedial action construction activities to be conducted under the Interagency Agreement. Specifically, the PPCD institutes standards and control procedures, establishes monitoring programs to verify the effectiveness of the contaminant control procedures, and establishes a decision process to specify actions for preventing contaminant dispersion that could result from intrusive activities.

A 60-day public comment period for the Plan for Prevention of Contaminant Dispersion begins July 30, 1991 and ends September 27, 1991. Two public meetings will be held during the public comment period. The first meeting will be an information workshop designed to describe the plan and answer citizens' questions. The second meeting will be held to accept oral public comment on the plan. Written comments are encouraged also during the public comment period and receive equal weight.
